HENDRICKEN FIELD

The roots of Hendricken Field and on-campus football at Providence College date back to 1922. The field is located on upper campus, near Harkins Hall. As Providence College began enjoying football success in the 1920s, the college moved its home games to Providence's National Football League stadium, the Providence Cycledrome. In late 1934, the Providence College corporation announced a renovation to Hendricken Field. On November 16, 1935, the Friars returned to Hendricken and played host to Rhode Island in the expanded 6,250 seat facility, a 13-0 Providence win.

FRIARS

Early Providence College teams were called "Dominicans", after the religious order that founded the school, or simply the "Black and White". Dominicans, however, also were known as "Friar Preachers" and "Black Friars". "Friars" first appeared in a Providence Journal sports article prior to the start of the 1929 baseball season. The earlier nicknames continued to be used until the fall of 1932 when "Friars" became commonly accepted.

BLACK AND WHITE

Providence College's colors came from the black cloak (or cappa) and white habit worn by Dominicans. The colors symbolize the ideals of the order: white for divine truth and purity, and black for the sacrifices made in the defense of truth and in the preservation of purity.

FRIAR OF WHAT HO

Providence College's first mascot, a Dalmatian named Friar of What Ho, was introduced at the Niagara game in 1935. Friar came from What Ho Farm in Washingtonville, NY, the son of Champion Silverden Imperial.

Saint Dominic, the Dominican's founder, was often portrayed in works of art with a dog at his feet. The choice of a Dalmatian was significant for the Dominicans. Dalmatians were coach dogs, trained to trail carriages and guard the coaches in the absence of their masters. The Latin word "Dominicani", divided and the final "i" changed to "es", "Domini canes", translates to "watchdogs of the Lord". As such, in the Middle Ages, the order became known for its vigilance in safeguarding God's eternal truth.

After Friar of What Ho passed in 1937, all of his successors were named Friar Boy.
