To the memory of the late
MALCOLM HOLLINS BROWN '33

Christian gentleman and friend of the Class of 1940, this book is respectfully dedicated.

Bishop of Providence

Foreword

THE THEME of the Dean's orientation lecture which first acquainted us as Freshmen with the great cultural and educational background of Providence College was pithily summed up in the axiom: "A Providence man is a gentleman always." At the time we only dimly realized that this statement synthesized the ideals of Catholic liberal education; now, however, we understand it and know that we have profited by and must soon exemplify the noble tradition that lies behind it.

The Class of 1940 on leaving college follows the usual custom of presenting a book which today will show our activities and tomorrow help recall the memories of collegiate life. College activities are educational in their essence; so when in the future we reread this record, let it reenforce that lesson first taught us by the Dean on that far-off day in September of 1936.

HE ADMIRES HIS EQUALS...

The Classes

Seniors

PAST merges into present as yesterday's hope becomes today's realization; as yesterday's ambition becomes today's culmination; as yesterday's potentiality becomes today's actuality; — in short, as the Class of 1940 prepares to be graduated.

This, the history of that class, serves but a single purpose: it is a chronicle of the salient events of the past four years, considered in the light of their importance to the seniors.

In the first year, under the guidance of the Reverend Robert G. Quinn, O.P., the class was introduced to a scholastic existence hitherto unknown to them; they were subject to no restrictive discipline — they were their own taskmasters. This Utopia lasted only until the first quarterly examinations were given when deficiency cards were meted out to a chosen few. Thereafter it was realized that study was an essential, though distasteful evil.

However, by mid-term most of the class had become accustomed to the necessary labors, and with William Farrell as president, Anthony R. Sasso as vice-president, Peter Foley as secretary, and William Riley as treasurer, the freshmen entered the fateful, much advertised mid-year examinations. Upon the return to classes after the holidays, a few vacant chairs were found where formerly there had been classmates. . . . College had become serious business.

After the vacation the traditional freshman dance was sponsored, and was surprisingly successful, financially as well as socially. Thus was the Class of 1940 initiated into the social world of Providence College.

The second year was begun with even more of the original number missing; as sophomores the class was more united, sharing mutual achievements of the preceding year, and anticipating future endeavors. The business of elections was carried out in an efficient manner with the help of the moderator, the Reverend James T. McKenna, O.P., and the following Class Officers were chosen: James F. Haran, president; William Riley, vice president; Howard Irish, secretary; and Irving Hicks, treasurer.

The social season was started in a fitting manner by the Sophomore Hop, which firmly established the class in the scheme of things. The feeling of confidence engendered by this propitious beginning encouraged participation in all extra curricular activities, thus making the presence of the Class more clearly known to all.

September of 1938 found a rather dignified group, united more closely in spirit, fewer in number, and one in objectives. The hurricane retarded scholastic activities for a short time, but during the second semester the Class proceeded to round out the social year with such notable events as the Junior Prom and the Junior Boxing Bouts. With the aid of the moderator, the Reverend Irving A. Georges, O.P., the services of Glenn Miller's Orchestra were obtained, at the beginning of its rise to national fame, to play at the Prom.

In the Junior year the Class was inaugurated into the higher strata of college life; Officers Bernard T. White, president; Michael J. Walsh, vice-president; William J. Carter, secretary; and John D. Donley, treasurer — with the friendly co-operation of the entire class — made this year a memorable one.

At the start of the Senior year elections at which Bernard T. White was re-elected president; Joseph A. Byron elected vice-president; Donat L. Brochu, secretary; and Howard L. Irish, treasurer; were carried out in a quiet, efficient, and orderly manner indicative of maturity. Under the direction of the Reverend John T. McGregor, O.P., the serious, important business of college was successfully transacted throughout the year.

Gone the bewilderment of freshmen . . . the frivolity of sophomores . . . the pseudo-sophistication of juniors. . . . The Class as a whole has matured, sobered by a knowledge of the realities that will confront the members of that class when they step into the workaday world after Commencement Day.

As the Seniors prepare to don cap and gown for the final ceremonies of graduation, they fervently hope that the sturdy, immutable truths taught them here will be as easily recalled as they were accepted; as easily exercised as they were assimilated.

And so, imbued with Catholic philosophy, they await the elemental battle of life — armed, engined, and crying the cry of Caesar: "Let loose the dogs of war!"

Juniors

THE Class of 1941, in keeping with Junior-year tradition, let no grass grow under its collective feet as it opened the social year with an eminently successful dance in late October. The affair, held at Harkins Hall, was attended by two hundred couples, who danced to the music of Bal Merce's band around a Hallowe'en centerpiece composed of a monstrous scarecrow surrounded by cornstalks. The arrangements for this Harvest Dance were made by John Gibbons, George Gardner, Charles McGovern, and Edward Crouchley.

In early November, after a two-weeks period of intensive and spirited campaigning, the Class elected the following officers; Joseph J. Howe, President; James E. Pettine, Vice-President; Francis X. McCarthy, Secretary; and John F. Keenan, Treasurer.

Teams representing the Class were entered in the Intramural Basketball League. Although the teams gained no championships in either division, they impressed the students with their tenacious fighting spirit. Five Junior basketball players gained positions on the All-Intramural teams, and many other third-year men participated in the Inter-Club tournament. Representatives of the Class of '41 were brilliant performers on the Varsity football and baseball teams, the latter being composed mainly of Juniors.

The members of the Junior Class were also outstanding participants in other extracurricular activities; they dominated the staffs of The Alembic and The Cowl, and were prominent in Inter-Collegiate debating. Many Juniors were members of the musical comedy cast, and also constituted a majority among the Pyramid Players.

The final plans for the annual Junior Promenade were announced before the Easter vacation by the committee in charge of the dance; these plans included the selection of Woody Herman's band as the music-makers, the Biltmore Hotel ballroom as the scene, and May thirteenth as the date. The favor chosen for the Prom was a gold bracelet with a locket attached; the locket was in the shape of a miniature gold book bearing the seal of the College and the numerals of the Class of 1941 upon a background of black enamel. The committee for the Prom was composed of Russell Varnum, Chairman, William Danahy, Edward Crouchley, Gerald O'Brien, Edward MacDougald, John N. Reynolds, and the Class Officers, serving as ex officio members.

Having commendably fulfilled its scholastic and social obligations for the Junior year, the Class of 1941 is prepared to accept the position to be soon awarded it — the position of the new Senior Class. And here this chapter of the history ends, with the Juniors rejoicing over past victories and planning future conquests — hopeful that their guiding light will shine as brightly and serenely during their last year as it has heretofore.

Sophomores

THE scholastic year 1939-1940 was destined to be a tradition-making one at Providence College, and the Sophomore Class, which showed its initiative and ability in its first year, contributed to the new spirit created simultaneously with the construction of the campus Residence Hall.

This esprit de corps was symbolized in the re-introduction of Freshman caps, which had not been in use for some time. These black and white skull caps immediately became the official, and compulsory, type of head-covering for the first-year men. The improved spirit of the Sophomores was also manifested in the all-around interest in campus affairs.

Early in the year the Reverend James T. McKenna, O.P., Moderator, received nominations from several concentration groups, and then called a Class election. The following men were chosen to guide the destiny of the Sophomores during the year: Ross E. Muenzen, President; Joseph F. Buzidragis, Vice-President; John A. Stonkus, Secretary; and Robert F. Dunn, Treasurer.

Though the Sophs lost to the first-year men in the football contest which featured the Frosh-Soph mixer, they regained some of their traditional superiority by dragging the newcomers through a muddy hole in the tug-of-war which followed. Both classes contributed to the evening of entertainment that followed the contests, which featured music, imitations, songs, poems and a Floradora act — all under the direction of Joseph McLaughlin, Sophomore master of ceremonies. The Sophomore committee in charge of the affair consisted of John J. Lavoie, Chairman, Robert F. Dunn, Daniel R. Flatley, Joseph Sullivan, John A. Yockers, James F. Caffrey, John Connell, and Robert J. Cooney.

As they entered their second year of collegiate sports, the athletes of the Class of '42 occupied more than their share of important positions in the team line-ups of the Varsity squads. The Soph heavies were conspicuously successful in Intramural basketball.

Latticed booths and streamers of black and white set the stage for the annual Sophomore Hop, which was supervised, in addition to the Class Officers, by the following: John L. Lavoie, Robert F. Dunn, Philip E. Foley, Paul Carberry, John P. Flynn, Joseph H. Sullivan, Albert Carnevale, William C. Reilly, John A. Yockers, William C. Smith, and Richard H. McMullen.

Jimmy Lynch's orchestra was engaged to play at the dance, and through Larry Simonds the committee hired the dance team of "Tony and Trixie" to present a musical comedy act during the intermission. The favor given at this affair was a compact of gold finish with a brown leather insert on which was embossed the emblem of the College. The Hop was enthusiastically supported by virtually the entire Class, and proved to be one of the most successful dances ever conducted at Harkins Hall.

In this way the Class of 1942 finished another year, putting a large check-mark on the credit side of the ledger and offering up a fervent prayer that the scholastic years to come would be as auspicious as was the second year at Providence College.

Freshmen

WITH the opening of the academic year, a new class entered the portals of Providence College. The entry of this group was more significant than one might imagine, for it is the first Freshman Class to matriculate at the school since the completion of the new Residence Hall.

Starting off the year with a fine display of school spirit and ushering in, perhaps, a new era in Providence College football, the Freshman team turned in a noteworthy record; it was accredited as one of the best first-year teams to ever represent the school on the gridiron.

Not only in sports, but also socially were the Freshmen well-represented, beginning the season with a whole-hearted spirit of co-operation in the annual Freshman-Sophomore mixer. This affair, considered to be one of the most successful of the season, gave the first-year men enough prestige to assure them a definite niche in the social life of the College, and instilled in them a sense of responsibility, a feeling of being an active part of the school. The Freshman committee in charge of the Frosh-Soph mixer was composed of Joseph F. Carney, Chairman, Robert T. Karshner, William P. Flemming, Charles T. Conway, Leo F. Leary, William F. Juges, William F. Quinn, and John F. Garvey.

The advent of the new year heralded the approach of that ageless bogey-man, the semi-final examinations; as usual, he took his customary toll of the Class. As if in celebration of the good fortune of those who survived, the Freshmen held their initial dance on the opening date of the second semester. The affair, a great success, gave evidence of the iconoclastic tendencies of the first-year men, for this dance was presided over by a bona fide Queen chosen by a secret committee of the Class—a distinct break with the traditions of the school; for hitherto this "honor" has always been accorded one of the students. A college man was selected as "Queen of the May" last year, and another one picked to rule over this year's mid-winter campus festival. The Freshman dance Queen was Miss Claire Fitzgerald of East Providence.

Gene Gray's orchestra provided the music for the dance; William Corkery, '43, made his musical debut at Providence College at this affair, singing two solos with the band. The committee in charge was composed of the Class Officers and the following: Dennis D. Izzi, John S. Tramonti, Edward J. Healy, and Hilary H. Connor.

During the year the Class was under the direction of the Reverend Leo E. Schnell, O.P., and the Class Officers, who were Edward McCabe, President; Thomas F. Burbee, Vice-President; Charles Cottam, Secretary; and Leo F. Leary, Treasurer.

And thus it comes that the Freshmen prepare to mount the educational ladder one more rung, their joy unbounded at the thought that they will soon have attained the distinction of being Sophomores, and will no longer be tagged with the epithet of "lowly Frosh."

The Alembic

Now embarked on the twentieth year of its history as the Providence College literary quarterly, The Alembic still continues to strive toward the ideal which past editors set as its goal. "The name ALEMBIC of this publication," they declared, "was proposed by the Very Reverend Dr. L. C. McCarthy. An alembic is a vessel — from the Greek ambis, a cup — used in chemistry for distilling. The title is a felicitous one, for the purpose of this publication is to distill from the data of life those pure truths that express the highest ideals of the academic world."

Established in 1920 and fulfilling the double function of news review and literary magazine, the publication has evolved through many changes to its present form. Since the establishment of the Cowl, student newspaper, The Alembic has been free to pursue with more unity of purpose the aims of a purely literary magazine, publishing short stories, essays, articles, and poems submitted by students.

The staff for the 1939-1940 scholastic year was headed by Lionel J. Landry, '40, Editor, and was composed of the following assistant editors: Anthony R. Sasso, '40, John T. Hayes, '40, Charles E. Sweeney, '41, Matthew P. Gallagher, '41, Ira T. Williams, Jr., '41, Edward Kaylor, '41, and Charles J. McGovern, '41. John M. Reynolds, '40, Business Manager of the publication, was assisted by Bernard Nadeau, '41, and Robert Roque, '40. George F. Carroll, '40, was Circulation Manager. The Reverend Robert D. Reilly, O.P., was Faculty Advisor.

Editor

Forthright and outspoken treatment of news stories and editorials won Providence College's student weekly continued and increased popularity during the past year. From the opening of the College in September to the graduation exercises in June, The Cowl faithfully chronicled all college news, made its opinion known on all issues pertaining to Providence College, and maintained a grade of newspaper work sufficient to keep it among the leaders in collegiate journalism.

Highlights of the year occurred when John Tramonti, '43, Staff Cartoonist, went to Hollywood to draw the prototypes of Mickey Mouse and company for Walt Disney; when four staff members covered a total of thirty snow-covered miles in order to get the Cowl to press after the February blizzard; and when Mal Brown died — as it happened, shortly before the paper went to press. But the stories behind the stories are legion; the lead story is that The Cowl never missed its mark.

The raison d'être of this, as of any other year-book, is to serve as a guide that the reader may be able in the future to recapture the spirit and recall the experiences of his collegiate life. It is the sincere hope of the staff that VERITAS adequately fulfills its duty to the Class of 1940.

The VERITAS is the youngest of the College publications, having appeared annually only since 1937. For this reason it is of extreme importance that this issue — and succeeding ones — be successful. The history and background of Providence College will be brought to the eyes of students

The Pyramid Players

The Pyramid Players, Providence College Dramatic group, augmented by a new and enlarged staff this past year, undertook three dramatic productions — a successful work in the sixteen-year-old history of its theatrical ventures.

Joseph A. Wade
Production Manager

In late October the Pyramid Players presented a Night of Entertainment that included three one-act plays. The plays were "Long Distance," by William Upson; "The Underdog," by Robert Middlemass; and "Thank You, Doctor," by Gilbert Emery. Members of the cast of "Long Distance" included Joseph McLaughlin, '42, William Martinelli, '43, John Stewart, '43, Paul Lesperance, '43, Edward Healy, '43, and Maurice Fagan, '43. The cast of "The Underdog" was composed of William Griffen, '43, William Corkery, '43, Thomas Farrell, '41, Francis X. McCarthy, '41, and William Gibson, '43. "Thank You, Doctor" was enacted by Francis Stadnicki, '43, Edward Healy, '43, James MacAleer, '42, Francis X. McCarthy, '41, and D. Harold Dennis, '43.

In December the Pyramid Players presented "Brother Orchid," a three act play by Leo Brady, adopted from a short story by Richard Connell. This production was offered on two successive nights and played before capacity audiences at each performance. This was the main presentation of the Players for the first semester. Members of the cast for "Brother Orchid" were Joseph A. Wade, '40, Francis Stadnicki, '43, Thomas Farrell, '41, John Antaya, '41, Joseph McLaughlin, '42, Edward Healy, '43, Thomas McBrien, '41, Ira T. Williams, Jr., '41, Charles J. McGovern, '41, Francis X. McCarthy, '41, and Edward Dupras, '40.

"READY, AIM, FRIAR"

"Ready, Aim, Friar," fourth annual musical comedy, was written, directed and acted entirely by the students of Providence College. The play, which was previewed over a local radio station, was presented at Harkins Hall for six consecutive evenings. The book was written by Norman J. Carignan and Robert C. Healey, both members of the Clays of 1939.

Comedy, which was entitled "Ready, Aim, Friar." Written by Robert C. Healey, '39, and Norman Carigan, '39, the Comedy appeared for six nights, and was received by enthusiastic audiences each night. Directed by John Andre, '39, Production Manager, the cast included Thomas Farrell, '41, Joseph Wade, '40, Robert Dunn, '42, William Cunningham, '39, Francis E. Mullen, '39, John F. Gibbons, '41, and Robert Richmond, '42, as principals. Over one hundred other students participated in the dance choruses and Glee Clubs, as well as in the specialty numbers.

"Thank you, Doctor, thank you."

The plot enlivened by a procession of hilarious incidents which included an imitation Munich conference, a goldfish-swallowing incident, and a realistic air raid, showed what happened when a mythical "Prominence College" came under the authority of a woman dean.

This year the Musical Comedy will be produced under the direction of Joseph A. Wade, '40. It is entitled "He and Sheba," and was written by Lionel J. Landry, '40, and Charles E. Sweeney, '41. John M. Reynolds is Business Manager of the Pyramid Players.

Members of the board of directors for the Pyramid Players were Joseph A. Wade, '40, Production Manager; John M. Reynolds, '40, Business Manager; and Kenneth Cayton, '42, Music Director.

The Reverend Fathers George Q. Friel, O.P., John V. Fitzgerald, O.P., and John F. Ryan, O.P., were Faculty Advisors.

"BROTHER ORCHID"

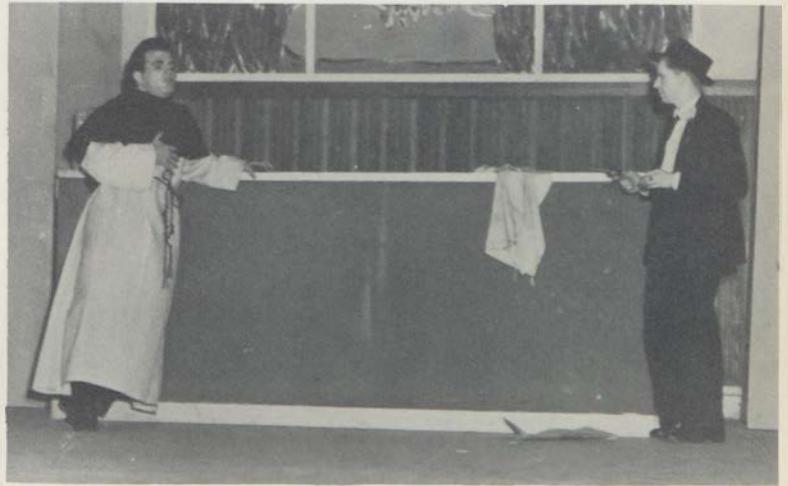

"Brother Orchid," a three-act comedy concerning the adventures of a big-time gangster in a Florentine monastery, was presented as the major production of the Pyramid Players for the first semester. "Freckles," "Dum-Dum," "Fat Dutchy," and other picturesque characters declaimed their speeches and cavorted about the stage of Harkins Hall during the two successive evening performances to the accompaniment of appropriate music from the pit. The production was managed by Joseph A. Wade, '40, and the cast included representatives from all of the classes.

The Debating Union

John J. O'Gara
President

The Debating Union, under the capable direction of the Reverend Ambrose P. Regan, O.P., entered upon what may, in future years, be considered the apex of its endeavor. This organization took a pre-eminent position among the college and university debating clubs of the East.

Daniel E. Geary, Jr.
Manager of Debates

At the invitation of the Debating Society of the University of Maine, the Varsity members of the Debating Union travelled to Orono, Maine, and there engaged in a series of debates with teams representing the leading colleges of New England. Two teams, one comprised of James McGowan, '41, and Charles Cottam, '43, and the other of John O'Gara, '40, and Daniel Geary, '40, carried Providence to victory.

In addition to this outstanding event the Union conducted weekly intramural debates. At present, plans are being made for a road trip through northern New England sometime in the spring.

The officers of the club were John O'Gara, '40, President; Charles Sweeney, '41, Vice-President; and Daniel Geary, '40, Manager of Debates.

The Philosophy Club

The Philosophy Club was formed last year, and under the guidance of the Reverend Paul C. Perrotta, O.P., it has since flourished. The organization was founded by some of the Philosophy students to display and demonstrate the principles of Thomistic teachings.

A Scholastic disputation was held on December twelfth, the thesis being: "The External Senses Are a Valid Criterion of Truth." The defender was Edward McCaffrey, '40, and the objector, Thomas H. Levesque, '40. A second disputation was held on January ninth, during which the thesis: "Knowledge Can Be Transmitted from One Person to Another" was defended by Milton Schellenberg, '42, and objected to by Thomas McDonald, '42.

The officers of the Club were Daniel MacArthur, '40, President; Edward McCaffrey, '40, Secretary; and Thomas H. Levesque, '40, Treasurer.

management of Ralph M. Melidy, '40, the band presented its well-organized ranks before the student stands at the home football games. Several new formations were brought into effect as Bertrand Cournoyer, '42, Drum Major, led the reeds and brasses across the white markers.

The orchestra was considerably more active this year, rehearsing regularly under the direction of the Reverend Leo S. Cannon, O.P., providing the music for the Pyramid Players production of "Brother Orchid," and playing on the radio to further the cause of the President's Birthday Ball Celebration. Many of its members also gave their services to the Musical Comedy.

The Glee Club elected Joseph M. McLaughlin president to assist Father Cannon in the arrangement of music and programs for the increased participation of the group in Masses and dedication ceremonies.

Lacordaire Club

Aloysius P. Quinn
President

For more than six years the public-speaking needs of Guzman Hall have been cared for by the Lacordaire Society. Since its founding in 1934, this society has had a flourishing existence as the group in which all who wish may practise public-speaking and profit by criticism offered by the audience. It is the further aim of the Lacordaire Society to foster poise and confident self-expression, as a complement to logical and interesting delivery.

There being no formal direction by any instructor, the necessary organizing force is provided by a president who conducts meetings and invites criticism of the speakers. Responsibility for prepared and extemporaneous speeches rests on individual members. Every effort is made to make the environment congenial in an attempt to prevent excessive nervousness on the part of the speaker. Finally, through the fostering of speaking contests and the encouragement of direct address before an audience, the Lacordaire Society aims at the ideal mode of self-expression, so necessary for the cultured person. The presiding officer of the club was Aloysius P. Quinn, '40.

Philomusian Club

The Philomusian Society, the main fount of activity for Guzman Hall, functions to promote a beneficial spirit of fellowship. President John M. Balsam, '41, Vice-President Stephan Jurasko, '41, Secretary Raymond Smith, '41, and Treasurer James J. Murphy, '42, set this spirit in motion when they directed a program for the initiation of sixteen new members into what is for most of them the first experience of community life.

The first directing force of the society is the Executive Body, which, according to the new Constitution ratified in December, is to be elected in September and to remain in office throughout the year. From this body flows the appointment of committees which direct entertainment, athletic, and study clubs. The most conspicuous committee of the society, that of the Study Club, may well owe its supremacy to the efforts of directors Robert G. Conway, '40, John T. Houlihan, '40, Mark J. Ryan, '41, Richard Burke, '42, William Browne, '43, and William F. Rock, '40, who supervised several groups in the discussion of religious and sociological problems.

The activities of the Entertainment Committee were centered upon the truly original institution of the Philomusian Society, the "Kelly Night" — a program of spontaneous amusement in singing, imitations, pantomimes, characterizations and instrumentation. The best of these was held this year as a Mardi Gras.

La Pleiade

Eugene J. Bessette
President

La Pleiade, Providence College French group, was instituted only a few years ago at the suggestion of a few students interested in obtaining more frequent occasions to practice conversation in French and to familiarize themselves with the literature and traditions of France and the French-speaking world.

Although comparatively young in years, La Pleiade, because of the enthusiasm with which students have co-operated with its aims, has been able to invite to Providence College prominent French-speaking lecturers to address its members and their guests. Among these lecturers have been Jacques Maritain, the eminent French author and Thomist, and the Hon. Felix DesRochers, K.C., Librarian-General of the Parliament Libraries of the Dominion of Canada.

At informal meetings La Pleiade members conduct, in French, discussions on literary and linguistic problems; the better to acquaint themselves with current trends in literature and to acquire conversational ability.

Officers of the Club for the current scholastic year were: Eugene J. Bessette, '40, President; Jean-Guillaume Myette, '43, Lieutenant-

Aquino Club

Edmund A. Baldi
President

The Aquino Club has the distinction of being the oldest undergraduate club in Providence College. It was formed to promote interest in Italian art and culture and although it appeals principally to students of Italian extraction, it encourages the membership of all students.

Early in the first semester the Club held a combined literary and social affair to which the Italian Clubs of Brown University, Pembroke, Rhode Island State, and Rhode Island College of Education were invited. On December nineteenth, 1939, the Club held a banquet for members and their guests; among the latter were the Reverend Jeremiah T. Fitzgerald, O.P., Vice-President of the College, Doctor Antonio Fidenza, and John Greene, an alumnus of the College who acted as Master of Ceremonies. Shortly after the Christmas vacation a purely literary meeting was held at which the guest speaker was Mr. Vincent Rapone, principal of the Thornton Junior High School and a graduate of Providence College.

The success of the Club was in no small measure due to the following active and enthusiastic group of officers: Edmund Baldi, '40, President; Ralph Paparella, '40, Secretary; Mario Marcarso, '42, Treasurer; John Lombardi, '40, Dean; and Albert Marchetti, '41, Steward. The Reverend Paul C. Perotta, O.P., was Faculty Advisor.

Albertus Magnus

John P. Haberlin
President

The Albertus Magnus Club, composed of upperclassmen of the Pre-Medical division, was formed two years ago for the purpose of delving into the history of medical science. Papers were read at the meetings of the Club, which discusses past and present day topics. On the social side the group enjoyed a Spaghetti Supper on the evening of December fourth. John McKenna was chairman of this affair, and was assisted by Joseph Buckley, Henry Paquin, Frank Pollard, and John Pulaski.

Officers of the Club were John Haberlin, '40, President; Louis Iacobucci, '40, Vice-President; Edward DiMuccio, '40, Secretary; and John Capuano, '40, Treasurer. The Reverend Francis L. Kelly, O.P., was Faculty Advisor.

Phi Chi Club

The Phi-Chi Club, which completed its second year of existence, was founded by those students of the Science Department concentrating in Physics and Chemistry. Since the organization was formed to foster an interest in and an appreciation of contemporary science, papers dealing with current scientific problems were read during the year by Club members. Among these treatises was one delivered by Joseph McCarty on "The Calibration of a McLeod Gauge," and another on "The Construction of a Radio Tube" by Joseph Miale. At the conclusion of each talk an informal forum was held during which the speaker answered questions and explained in more detail specific portions of his lecture.

Officers of the Club were Joseph McCarthy, '40, President, and William Millea, '41, Secretary-Treasurer. The Reverend Francis C. Hickey, O.P., was Faculty Advisor.

Friars Club

Bernard T. White
President

"The purpose of this organization shall be the promotion of amicable relationships with other colleges by manifesting a genuine spirit of hospitality toward our athletic opponents."

Thus is the aim of the Friars Club concisely expressed in its constitution. The Friars Club was organized in 1928 when it became apparent that necessity called for a group of undergraduates to act as a liaison between Providence College and the athletic opponents of the College. Since the day of its inception the Friars Club has ever striven to extend sincere and cordial hospitality to all athletic teams visiting this College.

Besides acting as the official welcomers of the College, the Friars Club undertook other activities: it provided cheerleaders from its own membership, and also presented the school with the mascot, Friar Boy III.

The Club's program for the year was culminated in the annual banquet held in April, at which the Officers of Administration of the College, the Coaches of the College athletic teams, and the captains of these teams were present. The Friars Club at that time awarded a medal for proficiency to the best blocker on the football team.

The officers for the year were Bernard White, '40, President; Harry A. Speckman, '40, Vice-President; Paul Oates, '40, Treasurer; and William Nesbitt, '41, Secretary. The Reverend Edward H. Schmidt, O.P., was Faculty Advisor.

Carolán Club

Leo — throwing it.

This organization, formerly known as the Campus Club, was founded and organized by the late Reverend Matthew Carolan, O.P. The Club adopted its present name in tribute to its founder, who labored to make it a success.

The chief purpose of the Carolan Club, which is composed of resident students, is to provide its members with various social activities. During the past year the Club was unusually active, holding dances bi-monthly for the enjoyment of both its members and the entire student body.

The execution and success of many of the affairs was due chiefly to the Club's Faculty Advisor, the Reverend Charles H. McKenna, O.P. With the aid of the members of the Club, Father McKenna sponsored a successful raffle, funds from which aided in building the chapel in Aquinas Hall.

The most successful of the Club's achievements was the pep rally, which consisted of a dance and bonfire held on the evening before the Holy Cross-Providence College football game. Speakers at this affair were Head Football Coach Hugh Devore and Father McKenna. The committee in charge of the affair was composed of Richard Mezejewski, '40, Chairman; James T. Fall River Club

Leo P. Smith
President

The Fall River Club is both the oldest and largest of the territorial groups. The Reverend Charles H. McKenna, O.P., in addition to his positions as Chaplain of the College and Faculty Advisor to the Carolan Club, found time to capably execute the duties of advisor to this organization.

That the group continued to live up to its reputation of being one of the most active undergraduate bodies is evidenced by a cursory glance at its calendar. Its annual Intra-Club football game was held on November eleventh, 1939, at Ruggles Park in Fall River, where the Sophomore-Junior combination overwhelmed the Senior-Freshman team by a score of 19 to 7 in a remarkably hard-fought contest.

The annual Christmas dinner-dance was held at the Stone Bridge Inn, Tiverton, on December twenty-eighth, 1939. This event attracted Providence men from many cities. The dance, under the direction of Charles Woodward, '40, Chairman, proved to be highly successful.

Newport Club

Harry A. Speckman
President

The Providence College Club of Newport County, popularly known as "The Newport Club," is one of the youngest territorial organizations of the College.

The Club has a twofold purpose: Primarily, the organization seeks to interest students of Newport and vicinity in furthering their education at Providence College; secondarily, it strives to cultivate and promote permanent and lasting bonds of friendship among its members. In furthering these ends, the Club held three socials during the past year. Joseph Nicholson, '40, served as Committee Chairman for the first two socials, which were held during the summer of '39. The final affair, a dance, which took place during the Christmas recess, was indicative of the fine spirit of the Club. The committee for this event consisted of Donald Albro, '40, Chairman; Edward Sullivan, '42, Joseph Leandra, '40, and John

Blackstone Valley Club

Joseph P. Keough
President

The Blackstone Valley Club was formed two years ago and now is one of the largest territorial clubs of the college. The Club draws its membership from the commuting students who live in the cities and towns situated on the banks of the Blackstone River.

During the year many social functions were held by the organization and its Alumni Chapter. Two of the more memorable get-togethers were the Third Annual Thanksgiving Eve Dance at the Hotel Hixon, North Attleboro, and a December Roller Skating Party. The first affair was sponsored by the Alumni, and the other by the undergraduates under the direction of John Silva, '40, and a committee made up of Zygmunt Czubak, '42, James Coyle, '42, and Edward Kirkman, '43. The Club also held a successful informal dance at Harkins Hall immediately after the Easter holidays.

Club officers were Joseph Keough, '40, President; John Sherlock, '40, Vice-President; John Gibbons, '41, Secretary; Matthew Gallagher, '41, Treasurer; and James Doyle, '43, Sergeant-at-Arms. Dr. Daniel J. O'Neill was Faculty Advisor.

New Haven Club

The New Haven Club of Providence College has been in existence since the opening of the College. This organization, composed solely of students living in the vicinity of New Haven, was formed in order to establish a closer relationship among those students. By providing its members with social functions during the Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter holidays, the Club has been successful in bringing together all of its members, and has grown to be one of the most popular social organizations of the College.

Matthew J. Malenczyk
President

For the past three years the Club's most important social function has been the Christmas dance; this year's affair was a complete success. George Terrace, '41, Chairman; James Clifford, '41, Albert Carnevale, '42, John Reynolds, '41 and John Flynn, '42, made up this year's committee.

The officers of the Club for the current year were Matthew Malenczyk, '40, President; Frank Flanagan, '41, Vice-President; Joseph Reynolds, '41, Secretary; and Charles Conlon, '40, Treasurer. The Reverend Charles V. Fennell, O.P., was Faculty Advisor.

President

The Connecticut Club, whose members are called "The Nutmeggers," is an organization just five winters old. Paradoxical as it may seem, this association, composed of Providence College students whose homes are in all parts of the Nutmeg State, is indirectly the progeny of the localized New Haven Club, for it was organized by and for those students who are not eligible for admission to the city Club because they live outside the environs of New Haven. Although its members have participated actively in various school activities, the Club of itself has not carried out any social program.

The officers of the Club for the past year were as follows: Marcus Driscoll, '40, President; Eugene Bessette, '40, Vice-President; Daniel J. MacArthur, '40, Secretary; and Francis Maloney, '40, Treasurer.

First row: Conlon, Sullivan, Driscoll, Bessette, Malencyk, Fitzpatrick. Second row: Lavoie, Iorio, J. N. Reynolds, Keenan, MacArthur, Finn, Clifford, Maloney, Franco.

New Bedford Club

The New Bedford Club, composed of both resident and commuting students from the "Whaling City," confined its activities to one social event this past year, but that single affair was a highly successful venture. The Club sponsored a dance at the New Bedford Country Club on Thanksgiving — the New England one; it was attended by over one hundred and fifty couples. Jimmy Lynch's Orchestra provided the music.

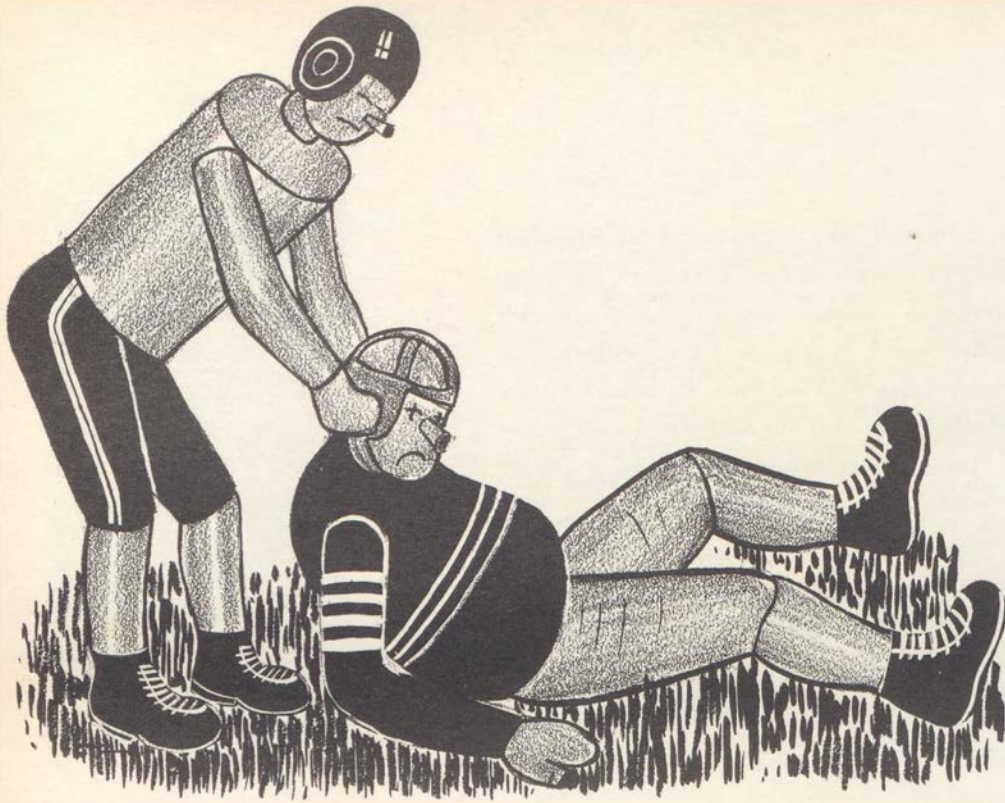

Tentative plans for informal socials were cancelled because of the Club's small membership in order that the members of the Club might lend their support to other school activities. Joseph A. Wade, '40, was President.

In Memoriam

MALCOLM HOLLINS BROWN, '33

"Malcolm Hollins Brown, thirty-four, athletic trainer at Providence College and a graduate of the Class of 1933, died Thursday, October nineteenth, 1939, from a complication of bronchial pneumonia and typhoid fever."

This is the unadorned story of Mal's passing; it does not attempt to describe him . . . his personality . . . his life at Providence — it is nothing but a colorless death notice. The true obituary is to be found in the minds and hearts of all those with whom he was in any way associated during his reign over the Friars' training tables. Those who never knew Mal will wonder why he is being eulogized in this manner; but that will be because they were never acquainted with him, never came under the spell of his personality. For Mal was more than just the athletic trainer, the healer of minor injuries; he was also the confidant, the advisor, the sympathetic friend of all "Fighting Friars" — until he was stricken, in the performance of his work, last September, and at that time missed his first Providence College football game in ten years.

In spite of his youth, Mal, a star halfback during his undergraduate days at Providence, occupied a position at this school comparable to that held by Knute Rockne at Notre Dame; and just as the nation mourned the passing of far-famed "Rock," so did Providence College grieve the death of its lesser-known but as well-loved trainer. Requiescat in pace.

Faced with the most ambitious schedule undertaken by Friar baseball teams in recent years, the 1939 edition of Coach Arthur Quirk's warriors wound up with a season's record of fourteen wins and three losses. The original '39 schedule called for a full season of twenty-one games, but cancellations and postponements reduced the original number to seventeen games actually played.

Villanova — Safe by the proverbial mile.

The team was fortunate in having a large number of veterans around whom a strong club could be built. Returning to the outfield were such ball hawks as "Slip" Barnini, Hal Martin, and Jim Padden, all of whom were potent with the big stick. Donat Brochu at third, Johnny Ayvazian at short, Jim Begley at second, and Jimmy Leo at first made up an airtight infield that rivalled any in the East. Captain Elte Deuse had the sort of talents to provide inspirational leadership; and with the array of ace hurlers returning, Coach Quirk had no problem but to choose a starter from the success of the attempt.

The Friar nine opened the season away from home; in taking to the road for its trip to New York it followed a routine schedule of the past five years. Of the three games scheduled, the diamond forces won two, defeating St. Johns of Brooklyn in the opener 10-4, and nosing out Seton Hall, 10-9, in a closely contested game. The third game with Villanova was cancelled.

After suffering their first loss of the season at Worcester to the Crusaders of Holy Cross by a 4-3 score, the Fighting Friars again hit a winning stride and won the next nine games.

and a double win over Brown University, with Walter Morris setting down the Bruin baseballers with five hits in the first game to gain a 10-2 victory and coming back a week later to hurl the Friars to a 7-1 win. Another game of the series was played at Kingston, where Providence forces resorted to old-fashioned baseball to down the Rollicking Rams of R. I. State, as Don Brochu, ace

One of the most unfortunate accidents in Friar baseball history occurred last season during the Boston College game at Chestnut Hill when Donat Brochu, struck in the eye by a hard-hit ball, was taken to the hospital in a serious condition. Dazed and disheartened by the mishap the team lost that game, 3-2, and the subsequent game, also with Boston College, by a 4-2 score, Brochu courageously fought what seemed to be a losing fight to retain his sight and it was through that he would be forced to give up the game he loved so well. But his courage and grit have overcome all obstacles and again this year he is holding down a post on the Friar nine.

The Friars wound up their highly successful season by winning their last three games. They convincingly defeated for the second time the Rams of Rhode Island State by the score of 13-4. Tufts, the next victim, fell before the Friars to the tune of 9-3. In the season's finale, Providence played a post-season game with Yale at New Haven, emerging victorious, 8-5.

Hopes for a successful grid campaign faded away as the Providence College Friars stumbled along a path littered with obstacles from beginning to end. The Black and White forces, completing their second year under the guidance of Head Coach Hugh Devore and his aides, compiled a record of three victories and five losses.

During the Spring drills of '39 the Devoremen showed signs of developing into a high-g geared aggregation, not only because of the success of the Notre Dame system, but also because of the presence of a very promising group of candidates from the 1938 Freshman combine.

But before the Friars could embark upon their schedule the factors which were to militate against any appreciable degree of success became evident when Ed Bradley, a Sophomore, sustained a compound fracture of the foot, an injury which kept him on the sidelines throughout the campaign.

The Rhode Island State College Rams were the Friars' first opponents. Lack of varsity experience on the part of the sophomores was responsible for Providence's inability to roll over the Rams by a much greater score than 6 to 0. St. Bonaventure was the next opponent, and the Devoremen lost the decision, 6-0. Although considered an upset, the result was not such, for the "Bonnies," led by Joe Carew, had a fine past performance record and were greatly underrated by local grid fans.

Following the St. Bonaventure clash, an epidemic of colds gripped the squad and numbered among its victims such mainstays as Paul Sweeney, Ted Alexakos, Ray Kowalski, and Bill Carter. Needless to say, the Friars were far from their physical peak when they met their third rival, Long Island University, at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn; but the spirit which is symbolic of the Fighting Friars offset the disadvantages of their physical condition, and the Black and White succeeded in holding L. I. U. to a lone touchdown, losing 7-0.

Providence made its first 1939 Hendricken Field appearance on the following Sunday against a heavy Niagara University eleven, and finished on the long end of a 14-6 count, the result of touchdowns by Dan McKinnon and Charlie Avedisian, the latter's efforts being an 85-yard jaunt to the last marker after recovering a blocked kick.

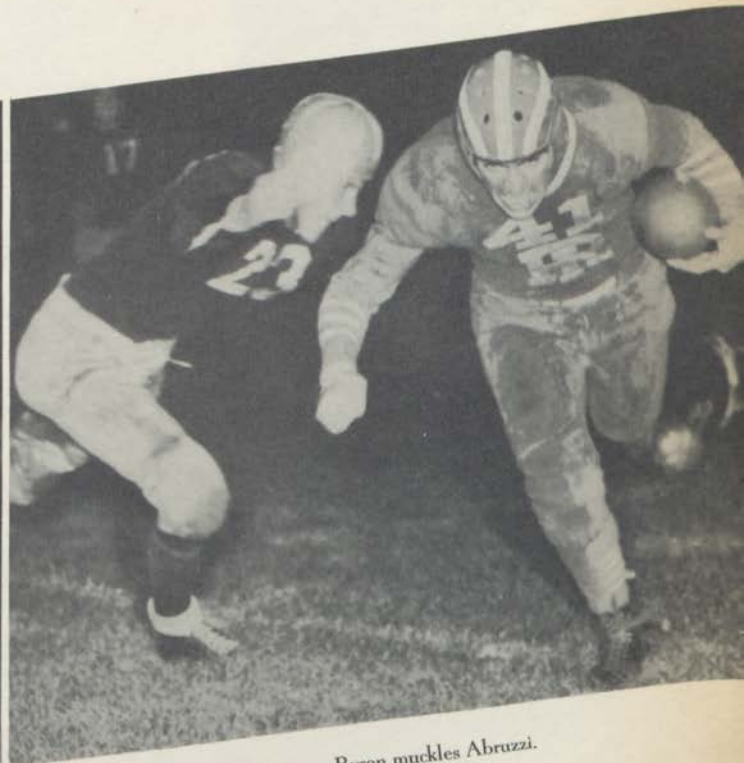

The staggering blows already dealt by Dame Fortune to Providence ambitions were trivial compared with the crushing shock which struck immediately after the Quinn, O.P., Athletic Director, and guard Ted Alexakos were sent to the hospital, where Ray Kowalski, Friar halfback, and Trainer Mal Brown had been sent earlier in the campaign. When the illness was diagnosed as the dread typhoid fever, the entire squad was subjected to inoculations, and as a result was weakened considerably. But the worst was yet to come, for on October nineteenth, the day before the American International game, Mal Brown died. The loss of the beloved Mal was felt not only by the Black and White gridders but by all Providence men, who had come to know and appreciate the service that Mal had long rendered the College.

club having a hand in administering a 27-0 setback to the Bay Staters. The win over the "Aces" was to be the last of the campaign. From that time until the end of the season the Friars, despite some good efforts, were mentally off key as the result of the misfortune which had dogged their tracks, and they fell before Springfield, Holy Cross, and St. Anselm by these scores: 13-0, 46-0, and 13-0.

The Reverend Edward H. Schmidt, O.P., temporarily took over the position of Athletic Director during Father Quinn's illness. Upon his dismissal from the hospital Father Quinn, finding the demands of the directorship too strenuous for his weakened condition, resigned. The Reverend Vincent C. Freshman Football

Although they played only two games, the Freshman football forces gave a creditable account of themselves by decisively defeating the Rhode Island State yearlings and dropping a close contest to the Holy Cross first year men. Anthony "Gig" Pariseau, 1938 Friar football captain, beginning his first year as Freshman Coach, grounded the Friarlets in the fundamentals of the Notre Dame system; and the manner in which they carried out their assignments furnished a pretty fair estimate as to their capabilities in handling the more intricate maneuvers of the Varsity plays.

Following a three-weeks' preparation, the Young Friars journeyed to Kingston to face a State Freshman eleven that had been undefeated in its three previous starts, and pinned the first defeat on the Kingstonians by a score of 24-7 with Frank Turbert, bone-crushing full-back, leading the attack. The Providence athletes employed a devastating ground offensive which enabled them to penetrate the State defenses for substantial gains time and time again.

The second and final game of the season found the Friarlets displaying their usual fine brand of ball, but despite an impressive performance the Black and White yearlings yielded to a strong Holy Cross Freshman combine, 7-0. Early in the opening session, the Providence team staged a drive which carried it to the Crusaders' one-yard stripe, but there the attack stalled when a fumble negated their efforts to hit paydirt.

The Providence College basketball team, returning to a lengthy schedule after a year of de-emphasis on the sport, struggled through the 1940 schedule in the manner of an unpredictable thoroughbred. Faced with a 16-game program, which was reduced to 14 games because of cancellation, the Friars registered five wins as against nine defeats.

Throughout the season Providence showed great potentialities, but it was not until final weeks that they found themselves and manifested the type of play of which they were capable. The caliber of their opponents was great, as the Crottymen met such Eastern standouts as Rhode Island State, Springfield, Villanova, St. Francis, Connecticut State, and Brown.

Only Elt Deuse, captain of the '39 squad, was missing from the ranks of the first five of last year. The four first string veterans who returned were Co-Captains John Barnini and Joe Kwasniewski, Steve Fallon, and Bill Murphy.

Coach Ed Crotty introduced the fast break in an effort to produce a high-g geared scoring machine, but later in the year the speedy system was scuttled and the slow break was used again.

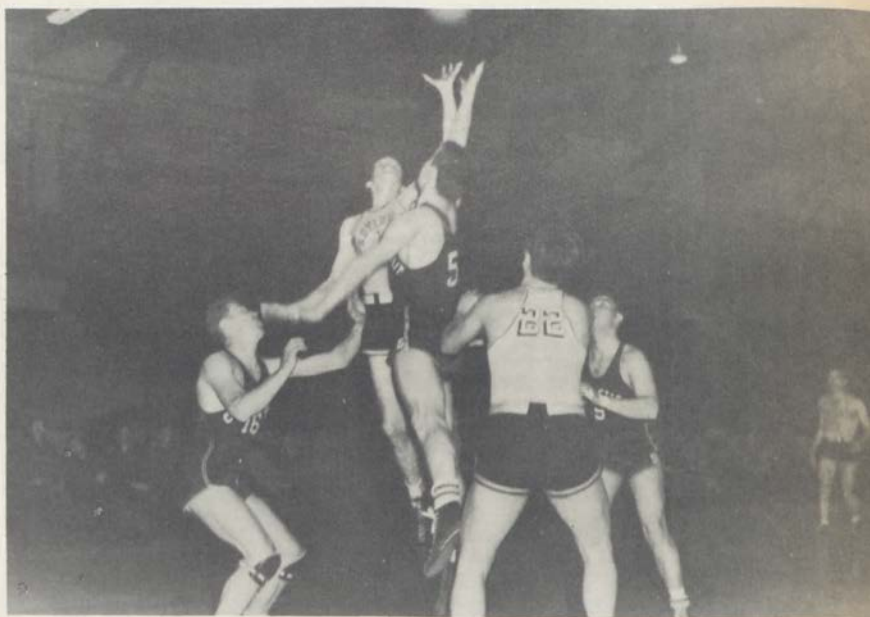

The Friars came through the first week of competition in fine fashion when they took the measure of Assumption and Becker, but following these two triumphs Providence experienced a victory famine which found them bowing to eight consecutive opponents.

It was in the encounter against Springfield on February twenty-second that the Crotty men finally made an impressive effort and despite the fact that they finished on the short end of the count, the Friars performed in such a manner as to evoke the applause of all who attended the contest, which was staged on the Springfield court.

After falling before the onslaught of the Rhode Island State shooters by a 75 to 62 count, Providence trod the victory path again when the team downed Assumption for the second time and then closed the campaign by atoning for many of its unimpressive efforts by upsetting the Brown University aggregation, which had conquered Dartmouth and Rhode Island State.

Two of the seventy dropping through.

Boasting the finest quintet in the last three years, the Providence College Freshmen dribbled through a none too easy seven game schedule and managed to finish on the heavy end of the count on three occasions.

The Black and White yearlings possessed an abundance of speed, and this advantage, together with the fact that they mastered to a great extent the art of ball handling and shooting, made up for their lack of height.

"Chet" Zabeck was the outstanding performer in the Friarlets' ranks. He is probably one of the best prospects to enter the College in the last decade. His guard-play was consistent throughout the campaign.

Others who figured prominently in the young Friars' performances were Bob Reilly, Ed Lee, Nick Budnowski, and Ben Sudnick, all of whom were forwards, and Hank Dugas, who did a commendable job as pivot man. Paul Zenobia, Ed Roth, Bob Karshner, and Bill Dunn operated from the back-court posts.

A 70-41 win over Marianapolis Prep was the most decisive victory turned in by the Friarlets during the season. The Black and White fell before the Rhode Island State Ramlets in two games — the first by a 53-57 count and the second, 64-40.

The Tennis Team suffering again from a dearth of veteran and experienced material contented itself with a short schedule of four matches. With respect to games won and lost, the season would be deemed a failure by those not cognizant of the team's situation. The Providence racketmen were primarily interested in building for the future. It was their hope to construct the foundation of a team which eventually would bring Providence College to the attention of the collegiate tennis world just as the College football, baseball and basketball teams have been noted in their respective spheres.

The season opener with New Bedford Vocational resulted in a 6-3 victory for the team. This was destined to be the only win of the year. For their next match, the Friars travelled to the courts of Worcester Polytechnic Institute where they were defeated 6-3. Naturally enough, the objective game of the year was with the College's cross-town rival, Brown. The Brown netmen made a clean sweep of the match in winning 9-0. The schedule closed with the Connecticut State match when the Friars, showing marked improvement, bowed by the close count of 5-4.

Intramural Sports

The Junior Boxing Bouts as seen from the ringside.

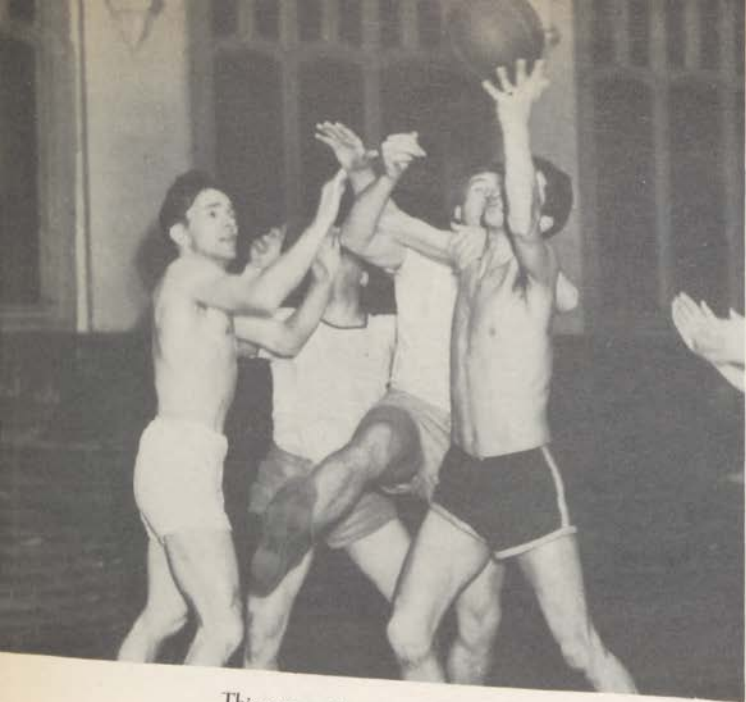

Due to the inspiration of the Reverend Robert G. Quinn, O.P., former Athletic Director, and under the leadership of Athletic Instructor Edward Crotty a definite intramural program was instituted last year. The intramural activity has been limited to basketball but such sports as baseball, softball, football, boxing, and ping-pong have been encouraged with the expectation that in the future they may join with basketball to make a complete program of intramural activity.

The Senior basketballers took a monopoly on Intramural honors by winning the diadems in both the lightweight and heavyweight circuits as another campaign was brought to a close on February twenty-first. The season was again marked by great success from the viewpoint of the number taking part and the interest manifested by the participants and spectators alike.

At the start it appeared that the Juniors in the heavy division and the Seniors in the lightweight division would win the respective titles without too much difficulty. But as matters developed, the third-year men finished in third place and the Senior lights were forced to extend themselves considerably in defeating the Freshmen in the playoffs, after finishing second to the yearlings at the conclusion of the regular league schedule.

The Frosh made their presence felt right at the start of the campaign. In spite of the fact that they dropped their first league encounter to the weak Junior lights, 24 to 23, the yearlings performed very impressively; and their later performances bore out the fact that the initial line appearance was by no means a dud, as they won the remaining five contests on the schedule before dropping two straight verdicts to the final-year five in the playoffs. In the first championship tilt, the Seniors humbled the yearlings, 32 to 8, while in the following test they just managed to edge out the first year quintet, 32 to 30.

out the campaign. He was ably aided by Ben Hazebrock, Don Healy, George O'Reilly and Charlie Cottam. The Seniors were paced by consistent Joe Lacey, who did the bulk of scoring and was prominent in setting up plays. Others who contributed to the Seniors' cause were George Carroll, Joe Lennon, Tom Fitzpatrick, Jake Edmonds, and Bill Riley.

In the heavyweight division, the Juniors and Seniors made their debuts in a successful fashion, the Juniors tripping the Freshmen, the Seniors defeating the Sophomores. But from then on the Juniors trod a rough path down to the wire, playing an inconsistent brand of ball. However, the Seniors continued on the victory trail and the Sophs, who got off to a bad start, finished the season in close pursuit of the last-year men.

At the conclusion of the regular league schedule, the Seniors were entrenched in first place with the Sophs and Juniors tied for the runner-up spot. With this condition prevailing, a playoff tilt for undisputed possession of second place was necessary. The Sophomores defeated the third-year men, 25 to 20, and thereby earned the right to meet the Seniors for the championship.

The first playoff encounter found both teams battling neck-and-neck for three periods before the Seniors spurted and walked off with a 37 to 27 verdict. The second test, however, was one-sided, as the last year representatives led all the way and subdued their opponents by a score of 44 to 30.

Jim Begly and Vin Nugent were the shining lights in the Senior attack, with considerable help coming from "Hank" Dubiel, Larry Shattuck, Dick Mezejewski, Harry Speckman, and Dan McKinnon. For the Sophs, Lou Sibbio, Ray Roy, Johnny Phillips, John Stonkus, and John Yockers performed capably.
