NEW BUSINESS CENTER CREATED WITH GIFT FROM FAMILY OF SOL KOFFLER

education center on November 2 in honor of the family of Sol Koffler, founder of American Tourister Luggage.

Addressing more than 200 guests at dedication ceremonies of Koffler Hall, Father Thomas R. Peterson declared, “Sol and Lillian Koffler have provided Providence College with a facility that we needed badly. They did it in an inventive way by giving us the means to recycle an older building into a center that will expand our educational offerings for the more than 1,000 students majoring in business.”

created to meet the educational needs of both graduate and undergraduate students for years to come.”

The new business center, which includes eight classrooms, a seminar room, and 24 faculty offices, was totally rehabilitated at a cost of more than $400,000. A major portion of the project was funded through a gift from the Koffler family.

Peterson has announced plans to construct a Recreation Center that will cost between $5 and $5.5 million.

The new two-level facility, which was recently approved by the College's Corporation, will include a 220-yard indoor track, swimming pool, eight handball/raquetball courts, and five multi-purpose courts for tennis, basketball and volleyball. It will primarily serve the recreational needs of the entire student body and secondarily provide areas for some varsity teams to practice.

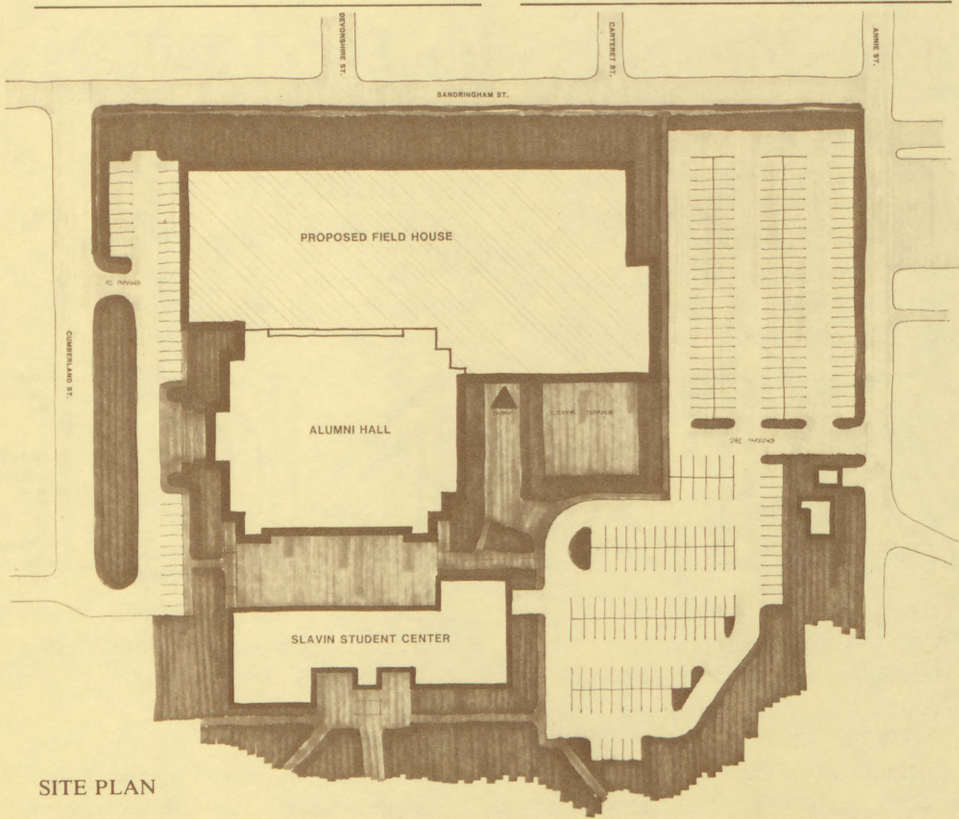

“Alumni Hall, the college's first athletic facility, was constructed in 1954 when our student body numbered only 934,” remarked Father Peterson. “We now have more than 3,400 students and more than 70 percent of them participate in our intramural program.”

“It has been apparent for some time that there is a pressing need for new recreational areas,” commented Father Peterson. “But we have had an established set of priorities. Under our five-year development plan, we have concentrated on providing the physical plant needed by our expanding academic departments. Since the college acquired the former Chapin Hospital property in 1974, we have opened a new Art Center, faculty office building, a complex for the music and theater programs, and most recently Koffler Hall for the business department.”

In his remarks during the hour-long ceremony, Rhode Island Governor J. Joseph Garrahy, stated, "In dedicating this building in honor of the Kofflers, Providence College will recognize the Kofflers' contribution to Rhode Island's economic life as well as their special contribution to the future of Providence College."

Speaking on behalf of the family, Koffler, who is Chairman of American Tourister, said, "We are very pleased to participate --through our financial support - - in the continued development of so great an institution that has done so much for Rhode Island."

Situated on the college's Lower Campus, Koffler Hall is a former medical facility at the long-closed Chapin Hospital, which the college purchased in 1974 and has been developing over the past five years. The building was constructed in 1910 and had been closed since 1965.

"Koffler Hall is a model of the 'rehab approach' to architecture," remarked Father Peterson. "By recycling an old building, we have taken an economical and innovative approach to providing the physical accommodations for our developing educational programs."

It has been estimated that it would have cost the college more than $1.5 million to construct a new building with the same amount of space and resources.

The college has witnessed a sustained growth in its Business Administration Department. More than 1,000 undergraduates are majoring in the liberal arts college's four business concentrations: management, accounting, marketing and finance. The number of freshmen enrolling in the business department has increased 14 percent in the last four years. In addition, the MBA program, that was begun with 28 students in 1972, now has an enrollment of 250 graduate students.

"The new center in no way marks a departure from our commitment to the liberal arts," asserted Father

Peterson. "In fact, the financial support of an extraordinarily successful business executive, like Mr. Koffler, we view as a recognition of the special value of our approach to business education."

"The support of the Koffler family inspires us to promote our business education program that encompasses the traditional arts and sciences. We strongly hold that the executives of the future must be versed in philosophy, literature, history, religious studies and the physical sciences."

Koffler has been active in Providence College affairs since his appointment to the President's Council in 1964. Comprised of business executives and professionals, the board provides fiscal advice to Father Peterson. In 1978 Koffler received an honorary doctorate in Business Administration from the college.

"As part of our overall development plan, the time has arrived to turn our attention to the lack of adequate indoor athletic and recreational facilities for our students," continued Father Peterson. "The committee, which spent more than a year studying the need for and feasibility of erecting this structure, noted in its report to the Corporation that a Recreation Center is not a luxury or a convenience, but a necessity for the quality of life on the Providence College campus."

David Gavitt, Athletic Director and the person who will be responsible for overall supervision of the Recreation Center noted that the intramural program has undergone an extraordinary period of growth since 1970.

"Under the leadership of Gerry Alaimo, the college's first full-time Intramural and Recreational Director, there were over 2,800 students participating in the intramural program last year," he said. "There were 100 basketball teams, 96 softball teams, 40 volleyball teams and 40 football teams. We have been able to accommodate the outdoor sports with the addition of three playing fields on the Lower Campus, but we have not been able to meet the students' needs for indoor facilities."

"We feel that a new Recreation Center will complement the strong academic curriculum of Providence College," added Gavitt. "The new facility will enable us to offer each student an opportunity to pursue physical fitness either on an individual basis or in the framework of a team program."

The 73,000 square-foot structure will be constructed adjacent to Alumni Hall, the gymnasium that was built in 1954. Plans call for linking the two structures and to utilize the existing locker rooms and shower areas in the gymnasium building.

Fr. Peterson expresses the appreciation of the College to Sol and Lillian Koffler at the dedication of Koffler Hall.

PIETRASANTA PROGRAM CELEBRATES TEN YEARS OF ARTISTIC SUCCESS

Coming from as far away as Texas and Michigan, over 160 people gathered at the Providence College campus on November 3. The occasion was the celebration of the Tenth Anniversary of the Pietrasanta Program of Providence College. Operated through the college's Providence-In-Europe Program, it offers interested students an eight-week summer course of study in the arts and humanities in Pietrasanta, Italy. "Graduates" range in age from 19 to 70. Some of the participants have been so taken with the program that they have journeyed twice to the Italian mountain town, and one person has returned three times.

Included in the day's events were a student exhibit in the college's art center, a buffet dinner, a Mass, and the blessing of a bronze statue of St. Martin de Porres. November third marked the feast of St. Martin de Porres. A brother within the Dominican Order, this Black Latin American was canonized in 1962.

The statue, which stands next to the college's library, was cast by the late Fr. Thomas McGlynn, O.P. Fr. McGlynn, a former Providence College faculty member, was the first American resident of Pietrasanta, and was also the inspiration behind the establishment of the Pietrasanta Program. "Padre Tom," as Father was affectionately called by the townspeople, was an internationally known sculptor, whose friends included Jacques Lipchitz and Henry Moore.

"An indivisible part of our celebration is the honoring of the late Fr. McGlynn," remarked Father Richard McAlister, O.P., the program's founder and director. "Father McGlynn inspired all of us who came in contact with him. He touched us with his dedication to life...his dedication to art...and his religious spirit. This is why people have come from places like Texas, Michigan, Delaware and New Jersey."

Among the guests present at the dedication of Fr. McGlynn's statue were his nephew, and two of his sisters.

THOMISTIC GUILD HOLDS MEMBERSHIP DRIVE FOR HEALTH CARE PROFESSIONALS

The Thomistic Institute Doctors' Guild, founded by the Dominicans in 1937, is currently conducting a membership drive under the direction of Guild President Dr. Anthony Merlino.

According to Guild Moderator Fr. John Kenny, the Guild was formed to foster the study of Thomistic philosophy for health care professionals. Membership is limited to persons in the medical and dental professions.

"The objections of the Guild are threefold: spiritual, intellectual and social," commented Fr. Kenny. "These aims are realized through such activities as a Mass and a family Communion Breakfast in October, a reception with the college President, a lecture during the winter months, and the annual banquet in May. Wives are encouraged to participate in all activities."

To join the Guild, a doctor or a dentist should write to Fr. Kenny, Alumni Chaplain, Providence College, Providence, R.I. 02918. Annual dues are $5 and checks are payable to the Thomistic Institute Doctors' Guild.

FATHER JOHN KENNY, O.P., PHILOSOPHY DEPT. HEAD, NAMED ALUMNI CHAPLAIN

Through a recent appointment made by the Very Rev. Thomas R. Peterson, O.P., President of Providence College, Rev. John P. Kenny, O.P. has been named Chaplain of the National Alumni Association of Providence College. Father Kenny fills the vacancy created by the death of the late Rev. Aloysius Begley, O.P.. Father Begley passed away last fall.

Father Kenny is currently Chairman of the Philosophy Department of Providence College, a position he has held for 28 years. In his new position as Alumni Chaplain, Father Kenny's duties include attending any official Alumni events, as well as serving as a member of the Alumni Board of Governors.

Fr. Kenny graduated from Providence College in 1931. He received a Masters degree from the Catholic University of America; and Doctorate from the Pontifical Faculty of St. Thomas, in Rome. He joined the Providence College Faculty in 1950, and last year was the recipient of the Alumni Faculty Award. Among his many other academic and administrative pursuits, Fr. Kenny has served as moderator of the Thomistic Guild of Doctors and Dentists for over 25 years.

OUR MOST SUCCESSFUL STUDENT ATHLETES NEVER LEARNED HOW TO DRIBBLE

by Ellen M. Harrington '83

Through the years, Providence College's athletic teams have had their moments of glory. But no other team and no other coach have achieved so much in such a short period of time as the Cross Country squad and Bob Amato.

Amato is the most successful coach in the college's 60-year history. And the harriers have the astonishing record of 101 victories vs. a mere 14 defeats (and one tie) --that's a winning percentage of 82%.

Amato, a 1963 PC graduate, has an incredible record. For example:
 -- His teams have captured five consecutive New England team titles and have finished in the top 10 at the NCAA's for five consecutive seasons.

-- Fifteen of his runners have been honored as All Americans.

-- In each of the last seven years, one of his runners has emerged from the pack to capture the New England Cross Country Championship.

Providence has also been blessed with at least nine runners from Ireland. "The Irish Connection" began in 1972-73 with Mick O'Shea, and there are presently five boys from Ireland and one from Scotland attending PC.

Foremost among PC Alumni in the running world is John Treacy from Waterford, Ireland, a 1977 graduate who is the reigning World Cross Country Champion. Treacy captured his first title in 1978 in Scotland and repeated his feat in 1979 in Limerick, Ireland, the second man ever to do so. Treacy is presently earning his M.B.A. at Providence, while training for the 1980 World Cross Country Championships to be held in March in Paris, France. If he retains his title, he will be the first runner ever to earn three world championships.

Fallon, '83 of Galway, David Ball, '81 of Dublin, and Nat Muir, '83 of Lanarkshire, Scotland.

Ray Treacy was an impressive freshman, finishing second in the New England Championships and 23rd in the NCAA's. He was the second freshman in PC history to earn All-American honors. Moloney placed 12th in last year's World Championships, and Fallon is the reigning Irish National Junior Cross Country Champion.

Running in Ireland is very different from high school and collegiate track in the United States. Running is done in clubs at the local and national level. Through Ron Long, the publicity director for running in Ireland, the results and progress of the Irish boys here is filtered back. The process repeats itself, and new runners come to the US every year.

Most of the Irish boys here were recruited by other schools, but cited Coach Amato as their reason for choosing PC. According to freshman Jim Fallon, "Coach Amato came to Ireland to talk to my family and that impressed me very much. Besides, PC is good academically, and it's on the East Coast." He and Paul Moloney heard of Providence originally through John Teacy at the Irish Nationals, and Coach Amato remembers writing their names and addresses on the back of his program.

Ray Treacy said, "I wanted to improve myself. I was working, and I saw what my brother John was doing, so I decided to give it a try."

Treacy found a big difference academically between the two countries. "In Ireland, you don't have time to do anything but study. Here, you can run and study and still have a good time."

All of the runners agreed that a certain amount of closeness exists in the Providence College community that eases away some of the homesickness. According to John Treacy, "At home, a student has to take care of himself. Here they're more spoon-fed, living in dorms and being tested continually, I have many people close to me and I really love it."

The products of "The Irish Connection" are fortunate to have on campus their own link to home in the person of soccer coach and Dublin's own Bill Doyle. According to Amato, "Bill has been very instrumental in persuading the Irish runners to come to PC. He has travelled to Ireland with me and certainly given credence to all that we say about our program. He also is a great help to the boys as they try and adjust to being in America and going to school here."

Coach Amato is reluctant to take credit for the success of his runners. "I see Providence College and the cross country team as a family. The family always has an authority figure, and my role is to give the runners guidance and their running programs."

PC has always been noted for recruiting quality runners, and Coach Amato is very choosy. "I look at the runner's times in relation to the training he has had up to that point. The most important aspect then is his potential to progress which is easily followed. Of course scholastics is one of our main concerns, and right now we're proud to say that our team average is over 3.0 (3.0 is equivalent of a "B")."

The PC cross country program has been successful in large measure because of the ways the runner's ability is developed. Each runner is given a program to follow and he develops a running pattern suited to his style and personality.

Training has become more scientific over the years, and the Friars now have a medical team working for them. It consists of a cardiologist and a podiatrist who are basically concerned with preventive medicine. An example of some of the technical aspects of the sport were pointed out by Amato, "For instance, we may add orthotics to a runner's shoe to give slight elevation to certain areas of the foot. You're talking of a centimeter here or there that may make only a second's difference, but at the world class level, this may be the difference between winning and losing."

Providence is noted for not running a lot of dual meets in the fall and training at shorter distances than most other runners. They also are fortunate in having enough depth to platoon their runners - not all of them run every meet depending on what their program or pattern specifies. Says Amato, "We try to pattern our runners and use the dual meets as stepping stones for championships later in the season."

The team and the runners themselves try and put across a very low key image around the PC campus. Although the administration, faculty, and student support has been extremely encouraging, many do not realize the talent that abounds here.

The team right now is coming off a win at the New England Cross Country Championships where Ray Treacy, Paul Moloney, and Peter Crooke from Long Island, New York, finished first, second, and third respectively. They are looking right now to the national qualifying and NCAA championships, and of course, to 1980 and the world championships.

Despite the low key image on campus, the Providence College Cross Country team puts forth a very proud, powerful image when they take the field. Says Amato, "When we run, we want the other team to know that they're fighting for second, not for first."

Dear Friar:

As you know, Providence College is celebrating its 60th Anniversary this year and in commemoration of this, we're trying to achieve another milestone by raising $525,000 for P.C. through our 1979-80 Loyalty Fund. This is an ambitious objective but one which certainly can be attained if we are able to recruit sufficient volunteers for our regional and class Phonathons. Please take a few minutes to review the following schedule. If you have a couple of hours to spare on the evenings shown below between 6:00 pm and 10:00 pm (except Newark, N.J., which is from 10:00 am to 2:00 pm), please complete and return the attached card.

RECORDS ARE SHATTERED AS ALUMNI CONTRIBUTIONS BOOST LOYALTY FUND

Throughout its 60-year history, Providence College has always witnessed remarkable support from its graduates. But this year, they are outdoing themselves. The "advance phase" of the Loyalty Fund has already elicited pledges that collectively approach the halfway point towards the record goal.

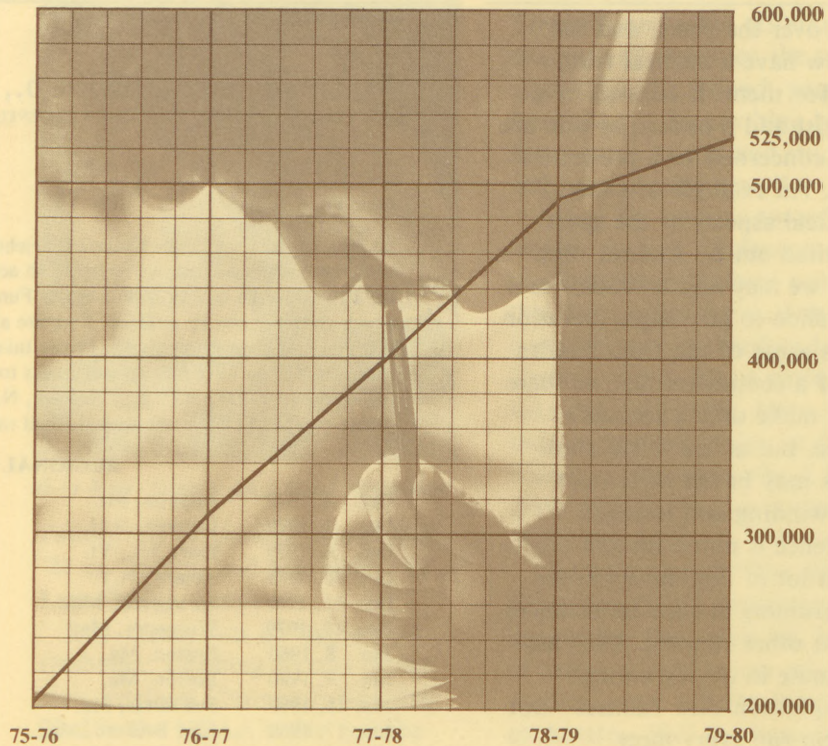

Figures available at press time show that $225,000 has been pledged towards the goal of $525,000. That puts the annual campaign about $65,000 ahead where we were at this point last year. More than 1,500 people have pledged to this year's campaign --that's another new record for the college.

"We are substantially beyond our projections," remarked William T. Nero, Associate Vice President for Development. "There are two primary reasons for our current favorable position. First, we have had three very generous gifts. Daniel P. Nugent, president of ITT-Grinnell, whose daughter Catherine is a freshman, has announced a corporate gift of $25,000. Francis L. Gragnani, this year's fund chairman, has made an additional contribution of $10,000 and his predecessor, Joseph B. McCarty, who headed the fund in the last two years, also gave $5,000."

"The second factor" continued Nero, "is the pacesetting work of our campaign volunteers. These graduates have been calling their friends and classmates over the past few weeks seeking their support for the college."

"In fact, one recent phonathon set a new record for telephone solicitations. More than $25,000 was pledged during a brief four-hour period."

An obviously pleased chairman, Gragnani cautioned against becoming complacent about the campaign's initial success. "We have a long way to go before reaching the $525,000 goal. And PC particularly needs the unrestricted funds that are contributed by the alumni," added the 1940 graduate. "During a period of high inflation, the Loyalty Fund provides the seed money for everything from operating costs to library acquisitions... from scholarships to faculty salaries."

"Providence College is not a state-support institution," the fund chairman declared. "It depends upon the generosity of its graduates and friends."

Gragnani singled out for special recognition the campaign's volunteer workers. "These volunteers are not paid. They are not reimbursed for their expenses. And they probably don't get even all the credit they deserve. But they work tirelessly to insure that Providence College stays on top and is prepared for the challenges of the 1980's."

Gragnani has also announced the Fund's Regional Chairmen. They are: Ralph W. Ardito '53 (Maine); John V. Scholan, M.D. '56 (Vermont); H. Kenneth McNulty '62 (Central Massachusetts); Francis J. Devine '42, Brian R. Corey '67 (Fall River, Massachusetts); Francis W. LaMorge '51 (New Hampshire); William M. Antil '51, William F. Frain '63 (Western Massachusetts); Jeffrey R. COLLEGE PROMOTES NERO TO ASSOCIATE VICE PRESIDENT OTHER APPOINTMENTS MADE

William T. Nero, formerly the Assistant Vice-President for Development at Providence, has been appointed Associate Vice-President for Development. A 1955 graduate of Providence, Nero has supervised the college's fund raising activities since 1967. He also holds a Master of Business Administration degree from Providence.

In 1967-68, the college's fund raising program received the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education's (CASE) "Annual Alumni Giving Improvement Award," a national honor that cited the increase in alumni support for the college that was a direct result of Nero's development activities. This past spring, the college's fund-raising program was selected as a finalist in the same awards program for the third consecutive year.

Joining the Development Office staff is Paul Gallagher as Special Projects Officer. Gallagher recently returned from a seven-year appointment as the college's resident director at the University of Fribourg, in Fribourg-Switzerland. He has also taught courses for the English Department at Providence.

Gallagher graduated from Providence in 1960. He received a Masters degree from Boston College, and did additional graduate work at the University of Massachusetts.

John Marinatto '79 has been named new Alumni Annual Giving Officer. Marinatto graduated from Providence last spring, majoring in Business Management. While a student, he served as manager of the college's basketball team for four years. He is currently president of the Our Lady of Providence Alumni Association.

Dubrovnik Holiday... Pearl of the Adriatic

8 Days/7 Nights

$689 complete per person
based on double occupancy

DEPARTS: April 4, 1980
RETURNS: April 12, 1980
FROM: Boston/New York

Dubrovnik is a city of contrasts: old and new, a place where an ancient city rests in the center of a plush, modern resort. It reminds many of the Italian Riviera, yet it has the charm of Venice and Rome, too. It's either quiet and peaceful, or fast and exciting—depending on what you look for.

At sunset, everything in Dubrovnik turns to gold: the red cobblestoned streets, the crystal clear beaches, even the sky. A quiet sense of peace settles over the town before the nightlights flicker and the sound of entertainment fills the air. It's a warm sense of transition as this seaside resort slowly gives way to the fast approaching nightlife. And throughout it all, the "old town" of Dubrovnik remains exactly as it has since the 15th century. A perfect medieval city in the midst of a fantastic seaside resort.

Your Trip Includes

- Round-trip transportation via scheduled air on JAT or KLM wide-bodied jets

of the college's political department, and presented at the annual meeting of the American Political Science Association in Washington, D.C., early in September.

Dr. Cornelius Riordan, associate professor of sociology, attended Brown University for a seminar in "The Black American Experience: Insiders and Outsiders," directed by Harold Pfautz. Dr. Riordan is currently engaged in a post-doctoral research program in human development at the Johns Hopkins University, Department of Social Relations. The research fellowship was granted by the National Institute of Mental Health. Dr. Riordan was also recommended for a Fulbright-Hayes Research Award and Fulbright-Hayes Lectureship through the International Exchange of Scholars program. In addition, he was selected for post-doctoral work at Stanford University. Dr. Riordan declined these three offers to pursue the opportunity at Johns Hopkins.

Dr. Kevin C. Kelley, assistant professor of economics, is serving a Fulbright-Hayes Lectureship at Yarmouk University in Irbid, Jordan, for the 1979-80 academic year, under the International Exchange of Scholars program. The university is located on the East Bank at the northwest tip of Jordan, near the Syrian border. Dr. Kelley will teach industrial organization, economic development and comparative economic systems, as well as assist in curriculum development, consultation and travel.

Dr. Lydia T. Black, associate professor of anthropology, has been awarded a two-year, $23,000 Translations Program Grant by the National Endowment for the Humanities to translate the personal journals of Father Yakov Netsvetov, the first Russian Orthodox priest of the Western Aleutian Islands. Written in Russian by Fr. Netsvetov, the journals chronicle the period from 1828 to 1863 and include all births, deaths, marriages, and the annual household census which were originally intended to be a permanent record of church-related proceedings among the natives. During the month of August, Dr. Black presented a paper at a professional conference in Anchorage, Alaska. She also attended a two-week Russian-American historical conference as the guest of the Bishop of Alaska and was a participant on a symposium of sub-arctic specialists at the American Society for Ethno-History in Albany, New York.

FOSTER '79 APPOINTED NEWS BUREAU OFFICER, ASSISTS PR PROGRAM

Daniel Patrick Foster, the son of Mr. and Mrs. H.M. Foster, of Michigan City, Indiana, has been appointed News Bureau Officer at Providence College.

A 1979 alumnus of Providence, Foster graduated with a degree in humanities. While a student, he was named an Outstanding Young Man of America. He is a 1975 graduate of St. Pius X High School, in Pottstown, Pennsylvania.

In this position, Foster's duties will include supervising the college's hometown news-release program, which serves the entire nation, and the college's computerized system for news releases. He also serves as the associate editor of Providence Update, the alumni newsletter, and Providence, the college's magazine. He also assists in the production of televised programs which are aired during the college's basketball games being broadcast by WPRI-TV.

While a student, Foster appeared in many theatrical productions. Among these were "Candide," "The Playboy of the Western World," and "1776." He has also directed productions of "Vanities" and "Angel Street" at the college.
